

The Miner.

Another Week.

Up from his sleep of darkness has climbed the warm sun once more, and we have ended another week of our lives, lived to see the beginning of another week, of which we may never witness the close. Seven days of life travel, seven days less of the world's woe and joy. Seven days more of the rush and battle of the world, seven days more of age, if we live to see them end. It seems only a week since the strong man who pushes and jostles his way toward eternity, was tossed on a parent's knee, was a lad at childish sports, wondering how life must seem to the bowed down veteran of years. It is only a step from the cradle to manhood, and the short way is so full of short rocks and deep reefs that we can only catch here and there a blooming flower as we look back.

Hearts that once filled eyes with tender tears at a loving or sympathetic word seared over with the many wounds received from the selfish world, and the poor, tell us of their sufferings, the stricken of their sorrows, the living of the dead, and we only speed along the faster, only hold back the good words and kind deeds the more. Some one is grieving to-day; a loved one was laid away in the dark and narrow home of earth only hours ago, and tears and sobs tell us of the joy he was to hearts that outlived him. It is not our home that is made desolate—not our hearts that swell with grief—and we pass along without a care, without heed of the dead and living. So is the world—rude, unheeding and cold. And the good book tells us to love one another, to speak kind words, to be charitable, to live for something beyond a life among men better or worse than we. Some one asked you for charity only a night ago, and you gave stern looks and harsh words. Some one would have been better, stronger to endure, for a kind word, and you would not bend your dignity to give it to him. Some one of your struggling brothers in life yearned for a cheerful voice, and your mind was too busy with thoughts of riches and trade to speak of the genial sunshine and the cool breezes which God gives us. Our life is a ladder, one end of which rests upon the cradle of infancy, and the other reaches up beyond the power of vision, resting at the foot of the great white throne, around which every soul must gather to hear the record made while in the body. The years and months and days are the steps which go up. Every day brings us nearer the end, every sunset is one less that will greet our vision. This morning we are seven steps nearer—what? Shall we say heaven? Shall we look down into our hearts, back into the record of one single week, and say that we have done our duty—done that only which has wreathed the angel's brow with smiles of joy.—Detroit Free Press.

GENTLE.—There is a dreadful ambition abroad for being "gentle." We keep up appearances too often at the expense of honesty, and though we may not be rich, yet we must seem to be so. We must be "respectable," though only in the meanest sense—in mere vulgar outward show. We have not courage to go patiently onward in the condition of life in which he pleased God to call us, but must needs live in some fashionable state in which we ridiculously please to call ourselves, and all to gratify the vanity of that unsubstantial, genteel world of which we form a part. There is a constant struggle and pressure for front seats in the social amphitheatre; in the midst of which all noble, self-denying love is trodden down, and very fine natures are evidently crushed to death. What waste, what misery, what bankruptcy, come from all this ambition to dazzle others with the glare of apparent worldly success, we need not describe. The mischievous results show themselves in a thousand ways—in the rank frauds committed by men who dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor, and in the desperate dashes at fortune, in which the pity is not so much for those who fall as for the hundreds of innocent families who are so often involved in ruin.

PEDDINGS AND PIES.—Americans, as a rule, prefer pies to puddings; Englishmen don't, and this is one reason why dyspepsia is less prevalent in England than in America. If pies were abolished from the national bill of fare, the national stomach would be easier, and "the most enlightened people under the sun" would sleep better at night, and be less troubled with that "all gone sensation" in the region of the duodenum which so many patent medicines make promise to cure—their promise, like pie crust, being made only to be broken. It would be difficult for the ingenuity of woman to concoct out of wholesome materials anything more thoroughly indigestible than an American pie. Even light pastry does not yield readily to the solvent power of the gastric juice, but the sodden stuff which forms the side and flooring of the culinary structure in question, resists the chemical action of that animal acid almost as obstinately as so much leather. If we must have pies, why not have them made on Mother Bull's plan, with merely a top dressing of pastry and no under-crust or side-crust? A vigorous stomach may dispose without much difficulty, of the waferly lid of a pie, but not without a sharp struggle of the thick, moisture-logged patissierie underneath. Yet tens of thousands of us lunch on this sort of pabulum every day, and most of us—such is the force of habit—would consider a dinner a failure if it were lacking. Away with the dyspeptic dainty—a parent of flatulency, heartburn, headache and nightmare! Let it be expunged from the card, and pudding, a real nourisher at life's feast, installed in its stead.

THE WAY THEY DO IN MORMONDOM.—The Utah Daily Reporter, alluding to the Byron scandal, says that in Utah, Apostles, Presidents, Bishops, Elders, Priests and Teachers, without shame or secrecy, practice worse crimes than Mrs. Stowe accuses Byron of. High officials marry nieces—their own brothers' daughters, and even two of them at once—marry half-sisters, mothers and daughters at the same time, and even sisters of the whole blood.

Roast Man.

In giving an account of the eating of a French soldier by cannibals, the London Daily News says:

If any of us look forward to being eaten by cannibals, he may wish to be informed how he is likely to be cooked. It is a comfort to know that the savages who may devour him are by no means devoid of refinement in their culinary disposition. Some French soldiers were recently taken prisoners by the Kanaks, and one of them was killed and eaten. His comrades described the process. The Kanaks first decapitated their victim; a matter of no small difficulty considering the bluntness of their hatchets. Ten to fifteen blows are necessary. The body is then hung up to a tree by the feet, and the blood allowed to run out for an hour. Meanwhile a hole a yard and a half deep and a yard wide is dug in the ground. The hole is lined with stones, and then in the midst of them a great fire is lit. When the wood is burned down a little and glows with heat, it is covered over with more stones. The man is then cleaned out and divided into pieces about a foot long, the hands and feet being thrown away as worthless. The pieces of the man are placed on the leaves of a large rose tree peculiar to the tropics. The meat is surrounded with coconut, banana, and some other plants noted for their delicate flavor. The whole is then tied together firmly; the fire is then removed from the pit; the meat is placed in among the hot stones, and thus, carefully covered, is left to cook for an hour. Women do not partake of this warrior's feast. Men alone are permitted to enjoy so great an honor and so rare a delicacy.

REPAIRING CASTINGS BY "BURNING ON."—The American Artisan says it is surprising that this plan is not more generally understood and oftener resorted to. It is in many cases perfectly efficient. We quote: "With large castings, the portion to be repaired is first heated until it approaches the melting point. The surface should then be coated with a borax flux, and molten metal directed in contact with it until the melting of the surface is well under way, which can be ascertained by probing with an iron rod. The mold of the part to be added being properly arranged, the molten metal is caused to flow into it, being at the same time in contact with the melting surface of the casting. When the whole has become cool, provided the operation has been carried on with requisite care, the new portion will be found homogeneously united to the original casting."

FROM THE ARCTIC.—A telegram from St. John, N. B., dated Sept. 27th, is as follows: "The expedition of Dr. Hayes and Bradford, the artist, has returned from the Arctic regions. They were entirely successful in every object. All well. They penetrated the middle ice in which the British whaler Alexander was crushed and lost."

A New Bedford dispatch of same date says: "Dr. C. F. Hall, with Eibenburg and Loo Koolita, two Esquimaux and three daughters, arrived yesterday on the ship Amel Gibbs, from Repulse Bay, Aug. 23d. Dr. Hall brings, as the results of his five years residence in the Arctic regions, interesting intelligence regarding the death of Sir John Franklin and company, and proof that none of them ever reached Montreal Island."

A STRIKING EXAMPLE.—Notwithstanding the repeated failures of every variety of journalistic beggar, there still remain in the world men who fancy that a newspaper can be started into existence and subsequently maintained upon anything but its own intrinsic merits.—Alta.

The continued existence of the Alta is a sufficient justification of those who fancy that a newspaper can be "maintained upon anything but its own intrinsic merits."—S. F. Times.

WE CONCUR.
ANOLPH SUTRO broke ground Sept. 27th for the deep tunnel which is to tap the Comstock lode at Virginia City. It is to reach the Comstock lode in a distance of 20,178 feet, and cut the vein at a perpendicular depth of 1,823 feet, or at a depth of 2,000 below the old office of the Gould & Curry.

NEW MAGAZINE.—Hitchcock's New magazine has been received. With its two superb engravings, Malibran and Leonardo de Vinci, its music and reading matter, it is one of the very best musical magazines now published.

A DARKEY'S ACCOUNT OF A SERMON.—"Well, saks, de sermon was upon de mircle of de loaves and de fishes. De minister said how de seven thousand loaves and de five thousand fishes was divided 'tween de twelve apostles; an' de mircle was dat dey didn't bust!"

JERIAL SLAB remarks that Grant is the owl, Sumner the peacock, Sprague the guinea hen, Ben. Butler the hyena, Wendell Phillips the wolf, Colfax the weasel, Jesse Grant the kangaroo, and Forney the ass of the nation. The lions and eagles are all dead.

IN THE PROBATE COURT, County of Yavapai, Territory of Arizona.
In the matter of the ESTATE OF DAVID OSBORN, deceased.

Kidder is hereby given all persons interested in the estate of said deceased, to be and appear before his Honor, H. Brooks, Judge of said court, at the court-room of the same, on Monday, November 28th, A. D. 1892, at ten o'clock A. M., of that day, to show cause, if any they can, why the prayer of J. C. Crane, administrator of said estate, should not be granted and an order be made for the sale of the real property of said estate consisting of one ranch situated on Willow Creek, and lots 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24, west side of Granite street, McCormick addition No. 1, to the town of Prescott.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Probate Court, this 5th day of October, A. D. 1892.
